

LORENZO VIDINO

IMPACT: Lorenzo Vidino is an Italian-American legal scholar whose research promotes conspiracy theories about the Muslim Brotherhood in Europe and the U.S. Vidino is connected to numerous anti-Muslim think tanks in the U.S. and Europe, and has published in various anti-Muslim outlets. Vidino has served as an advisor to governments in Europe and he is currently the program director of George Washington University's Program on Extremism.

- Dr. Lorenzo Vidino is an Italian-American legal scholar. He received a law degree from the University of Milan Law School and a doctorate in International Relations from Tufts University's Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy. Currently the Director of the Program on Extremism at George Washington University (GWU), Vidino has previously held positions at Harvard University's Kennedy School of Government, the U.S. Institute of Peace, the RAND Corporation, and the Center for Security Studies at ETH Zürich. According to his GWU biography, Vidino is “an expert on Islamism in Europe and North America” and has “advised law enforcement officials around the world.”
- Vidino focuses on the Muslim Brotherhood, an organization founded in Egypt in 1928 by Hassan al-Banna to revitalize Islamic life and challenge to European hegemony. In an interview with NPR in March 2017, Vidino stated, “I’ve been studying the brotherhood for 15 years...I maybe understand 10 percent of how it works.” Vidino has been interviewed or featured in national and international media on issues concerning terrorism and radicalization, including New York Times, Washington Post, Wall Street Journal, PBS, CNN, Fox News, MSNBC, Al Jazeera, and Al Arabiya, as well as a column in La Stampa.
- In November 2006, Vidino published an essay titled “Aims and Methods of Europe’s Muslim Brotherhood” for the Hudson Institute, a Washington, D.C.-based think tank that has brought Geert Wilders to the U.S. to warn against the Muslim plot to “rule the world by the sword.” In the essay, Vidino discusses “Europe’s Muslim Brotherhood,” arguing, “It is not unreasonable to assume...the ever-flexible Brotherhood would embrace violent tactics in the West as well.” Vidino published another essay for the think tank in August 2008, titled “Islam, Islamism, and Jihadism in Italy.”
- In his book The New Muslim Brotherhood in the West (2010), Vidino draws on a document from 1982 that allegedly proves that the Muslim Brotherhood aspires to take over the world. He also cites French journalist Sylvain Besson’s 2005 book La conquête de l’Occident: Le projet secret des Islamists (The Conquest of the Occident: The Secret Project of the Islamists). Vidino presents these conspiracy theories as reasonable and substantiated facts.
- In a publication in 2011 for the Wilfried Martens Centre for European Studies (CES), the think tank of the European People’s Party (EPP), Vidino argued that “only authentically European Muslim organizations that act independently of foreign influences can become valid representatives of Europe’s Muslim communities,” implying that those linked to non-European countries or to transnational Muslim movements are illegitimate. According to Vidino, Muslim organizations in the West are formally disconnected from, but ideologically influenced by the Muslim Brotherhood. In the publication, he furthered the claim that Muslim Brotherhood organizations are “modern-day Trojan horses, engaged in a sort of stealth subversion aimed at weakening European society from within, patiently laying the foundations for its replacement with an Islamic order.” Vidino has also stated that this “new” Muslim Brotherhood network has a “remarkable propaganda machine” that can discredit opponents with accusations of Islamophobia and racism.
- In November 2013, Vidino published a report for the Center for Security Studies at ETH Zürich on “Jihadist Radicalization in Switzerland.” Although the report’s focus is primarily on militant movements, three pages are dedicated to the Muslim Brotherhood. Vidino quotes the British ‘counter-extremism’ think-tank Quilliam Foundation, arguing that in several European countries, Brotherhood networks have been criticized for creating “the mood music to which suicide bombers dance.” He also argues that Arab regimes and Israel “have often accused Brotherhood networks operating in Europe of financing terrorist activities with funds they collect among European Muslim communities,” without giving any proof or discussing the validity of this claim.
- In August 2017, Vidino published a report on the “Muslim Brotherhood in Austria.” This report was financed by Austria’s domestic intelligence agency—Office for the Protection of the Constitution and Counterterrorism (Bundesamt für Verfassungsschutz und Terrorismusbekämpfung)—as well as the Austrian Integration Fund (Österreichischer Integrationsfonds), which has a history of producing anti-Muslim research and promoting Muslims who support anti-Muslim legislation, such as Vidino’s European Foundation for Democracy (EFD) colleague Ahmad Mansour of Germany. EFD is an anti-Muslim, Brussels-based think tank linked to the Washington, D.C.-based

Foundation for the Defense of Democracy. EFD Senior Policy Advisor Vidino and EFD's affiliate scholars publish articles ranging from the so-called threat of Sharia, 'Islamist extremism,' and conspiracy theories about the Muslim Brotherhood.

- Vidino's Austria-funded report accused nearly every Muslim organization in Austria as being tied to the Muslim Brotherhood, and was later quoted as the only source in the Office for the Protection of the Constitution and Counterterrorism's 2018 annual report. This report was unprecedented, as the Austrian state for the first time targeted not only 'violent Jihadists,' but the legally recognized Islamic Religious Authority in Austria, (Islamische Glaubensgemeinschaft in Österreich). The intelligence agency's report framed religious teacher training and Islamic education in public schools for Muslim pupils—previously supported initiatives by the state—as 'Islamist' threats and as strategies to create a "counter-society" in Austria.
- Vidino's latest book on the Muslim Brotherhood, The Closed Circle: Joining and Leaving the Muslim Brotherhood in the West, was published in March 2020. According to the book description, "The Muslim Brotherhood in the West remains a mysterious entity. In The Closed Circle, Lorenzo Vidino offers an unprecedented inside view into how one of the world's most influential Islamist groups operates."
- Vidino also has a history of advancing unscientific theories and anti-Muslim tropes. A proponent of the discredited 'radicalization theory,' Vidino argues that U.S. cooperation on 'counterradicalization' programs with "nonviolent Islamists could provide results in the short term, but there are doubts as to their long-term implications." Vidino also argues that "nonviolent Islamist" organizations in Europe, such as those influenced by the Muslim Brotherhood, advocate "a rejection of many core Western values."
- Vidino is the Director of the Program on Extremism at George Washington University. According to its website, the program "provides analysis on issues related to violent and non-violent extremism" and "aims to develop pragmatic policy solutions that resonate with policymakers, civic leaders, and the general public." The program employs a "multidisciplinary team of experts from across the globe, including government officials with experience in public safety and law enforcement, scholars, former extremists, and counter-extremism practitioners providing first-hand assistance to families grappling with radicalization." The program also supports the U.S. Congressional Counter-Terrorism Caucus by providing "non-partisan analysis on issues related to violent and non-violent extremism through reports, briefings, and academic inquiries." Launched in June 2018, the caucus is described as "the leading bipartisan voice in Congress for pragmatic approaches to tackling extremism and radicalization." In February 2020, GWU announced that the Program on Extremism would become "part of a new consortium of academic, industry, government and laboratory partners throughout the country to support the U.S. Department of Homeland Security with research focused on extremism and counterterrorism."
- According to reporting in the GW Hatchet in October 2019, Vidino attempted to prevent a former employee from writing a story about the death of journalist Jamal Khashoggi for The Atlantic. According to MEMO, leaks reveal that in May 2017 Vidino and UAE Minister of Foreign Affairs Abdullah Bin Zayed were arranging to meet, together with Mokhtar Awad, a Research Fellow in the GWU Program on Extremism. This meeting was organized by the UAE Ambassador to the U.S., Yousef Al-Otaiba, who in email exchanges expressed his goal to "defeat the voices of islamism [sic]" in the U.S.
- Lorenzo Vidino has maintained connections with many anti-Muslim organizations and writers in the U.S. and Europe. In 2004 and 2005, Vidino served as Senior Analyst with Steve Emerson's Investigative Project on Terrorism (IPT) in Washington, D.C. Emerson has a long history of propagating anti-Muslim conspiracy theories, such as 'no-go zones' in Europe and 'radical' Muslim organizations infiltrating the U.S. Emerson wrote the foreword for Vidino's book Al Qaeda in Europe: The New Battleground of International Jihad (2006).
- In November 2005, Vidino gave an interview to the far-right, anti-Muslim website FrontPage Magazine. The website is edited by David Horowitz, who is described as the "godfather of the modern anti-Muslim movement" by the U.S.-based Southern Poverty Law Center (SPLC). When asked if Europeans are witnessing the end of Europe, Vidino presented 'great replacement' conspiracy theories, stating, "Demography doesn't lie: in a couple of decades non-ethnic Europeans will represent the majority of the population in many European cities and a large percentage of them will be Muslim." He also responded, "It is crucial for Europe to find its soul and be proud once again of its history, tradition and values."

LORENZO VIDINO

- In late 2005, Vidino published an article titled “The Muslim Brotherhood’s Conquest of Europe” in the Middle East Quarterly (MEQ), which is published by Daniel Pipes’ anti-Muslim Middle East Forum. Vidino argues that Muslim political organizations in Germany, which he describes as “duplicitous” and ‘terrorist’-linked, are working to spread Islamic law throughout Europe. MEF translated the article into multiple languages, including French, German, Arabic, Danish, and Italian. His article has also been linked on the German anti-Muslim weblog PI-News.
- Vidino regularly quotes Udo Ulfkotte (d. 2017), a German anti-Muslim conspiracy theorist who believed that Germany was being ‘Islamized.’ Ulfkotte claimed that the alleged poor hygiene of Turkish women was to blame for an E. coli outbreak in Germany, stating that Muslims are waging a “fecal matter jihad” against Europeans. In his book Mekka Deutschland - Die stille Islamisierung (Mecca Germany - The Silent Islamization; 2015), Ulfkotte wrote, “Seven times per hour, a Muslim cuts off the head of a non-Muslim [...] or kills him in another way and loudly shouts out ‘Allahu Akbar.’” Vidino has drawn on Ulfkotte’s book Der Krieg in unseren Städten - Wie radikale Islamisten Deutschland unterwandern (War in Our Cities. How Radical Islamists Are Infiltrating Germany; 2003). Vidino also interviewed Ulfkotte as an expert on ‘Islamic terrorism’ in February 2004 in Frankfurt as a source for one of his publications.
- Vidino has been cited by the anti-Muslim blogger who goes by the pen name “Fjordman,” whose texts were copy-pasted by Norwegian white nationalist and mass murderer Anders Behring Breivik in his manifesto. Breivik murdered 77 people in Norway, arguing that his targets—politically leftist youth and the Norwegian government—and their pro-immigration policies were to blame for enabling ‘Islamization.’ “Fjordman” cited Vidino’s texts in an attempt to demonstrate that the Muslim Brotherhood was ‘infiltrating’ Europe. “Fjordman” has repeated these conspiracy theories while citing Vidino on the influential anti-Muslim blogsites Gates of Vienna and Jihad Watch.
- Vidino’s work has had impacts on policy in Austria and Germany, as well as on a European level. He is primarily connected to center-right conservative parties in Europe. In 2010, he was invited along with his EFD colleague, Visiting Fellow and former foreign policy advisor of Donald Trump Walid Phares, to the Austrian Political Academy of the Austrian People’s Party (Österreichische Volkspartei) in Vienna. The talks were published in June 2011 by the Wilfried Martens Centre for European Studies (CES), the think tank of the largest political group in the European Parliament representing conservative and Christian democratic political parties. Vidino has also been interviewed on the topic of the Muslim Brotherhood for the Bundeszentrale für politische Bildung (Federal Agency for Civic Education), a federal agency for civic education in Germany.
- In December 2018, Vidino presented his work as the coordinator of ‘Study Commission on the Phenomenon of Radicalization and Jihadist Extremism’ (Commissione di studio sul fenomeno della radicalizzazione e dell’estremismo jihadista) alongside the Italy’s then-minister of interior, Marco Minniti (2016-2018) of the social democratic Partito Democratico (Democratic Party).
- Vidino’s work has also carried influence in the U.S. Congress. In April 2011, Vidino was invited to present testimony at a House Select Intelligence Committee hearing on the Muslim Brotherhood. The hearing was initiated by then-Rep. Sue Myrick (R-N.C.), who has bolstered conspiracy theories about Muslim infiltration in U.S. institutions. During this hearing, both Chairwoman Myrick and Vidino referred to a 1991 ‘explanatory memorandum’, an obscure document that is cited to further the conspiracy theory that the Muslim Brotherhood plans to take over America through a “civilization jihad.” This document has been debunked and discredited. Vidino described the document as “absolutely shocking,” and stated that some of the organizations listed in the document that still exist today have “just gotten better at presenting a more moderate facade.” In his written testimony, Vidino again furthered the argument that the Muslim Brotherhood in the West is a “modern day Trojan horse engaged in a sort of stealth subversion aimed at weakening Western society from within.” He singled out the Council on American-Islamic Relations (CAIR), the largest Muslim civil rights organizations in the U.S., as a prime example of an organization in the U.S. surreptitiously spreading ‘radical’ ideology.
